

Ted often used “one pagers”—learning activities to prompt discussion of the issue of the day. This one is “Christian Higher Education Choices.”

The Crucial Choice

Christian higher education . . .

Education for power . . . or . . . Education for service

Which image are you building?

What Sort of College?

The ignored college (who needs it?)

The persecuted and isolated college (peculiar experience for peculiar people)

The hidden college—the engine of the underground

The redemptive college—exemplary redemptive community and valued training post for service.

Among the events that made the past ____ years memorable, identify any event that had its roots in a Christian response to social, community, human conditions, or any other event outside your institution?

Think of, anticipate, or creatively project in your mind’s eye an event that could make the next years more memorable:

With reference to (year) what situations in the nation and the world may your college be responding to?

In what ways are American Christian colleges equipping students with the multicultural attitudes required to live and minister in a multi cultural society?
