

Ted often used “one pagers”—learning activities to prompt discussion of the issue of the day. This one is “Less Important - More Important” from the Values Development Education Program, 1970s.

Rank as less important and more important.

To manage time wisely.	To get along well with others.
To cope with difficulties	To learn from experience.
To seek help from others when needed.	To enjoy and appreciate the arts and literature.
To make responsible moral choices.	To use reference sources effectively.
To learn from books and lectures.	To communicate effectively.
