

Self Assessment of Development Skills

Ted Ward

Development Skills	Rate yourself in each skill					Do you want help to improve?
	Strong				Weak	Not Needed	Yes, Perhaps	Yes, Very Much
Leading reflection with communities
Building a biblical base of ministry to the poor
Analyzing the reality of the community
Orienting research with communities
Planning
Identifying and clarifying needs
Listening to others and clarifying their messages
Balancing family life with the ministry
Applying biblical principles to the projects
Identifying barriers to development
Development principles for development ministry
Motivating and encouraging others
Organizing

Building relationships with people
Working with representation of other agencies
Working/dealing with tension/stress
Involving others in planning for development
Leading
Applying appropriate technical and academic skills related to my specialty
Accompanying the process of development projects
Becoming a growing person myself
Discovering and obtaining helpful resources
Counseling and advising
Identifying appropriate evaluation indicators for evaluation
Planning strategies of evangelism among communities
Working with pastors of other churches
Developing sensitivity and skill in working with special interest groups

* Unpublished Instrument 1986